

When It Comes Right Down To It

*Raising children by yourself is not the easiest.
God gives us no more than we can handle, with his help,
and we try to do our best.*

*Looking back on our lives gives us the opportunity to improve on certain things, not repeat.
As we move forward, life challenges us
and that is not always the simplest feat.*

*Making something out of our lives,
is most often not just about ourselves and what satisfies.
When you have the privilege to mold young children,
who they are as people becomes what truly gratifies.*

Whether it is an athletic, scholastic or artistic endeavor, the only true measure of success is the integrity of their character, which can withstand “any” weather.

*You’ve got great children who are on balance.
They will become all that they can, with God’s grace and your continued nurturing, unconditional, sacrificial love and guidance.*
